There is nothing like the luxurious comfort of fully ducted air-conditioning. No matter what the temperature outside, your home will be the ideal temperature inside. Warm and cosy in winter, cool and refreshing in summer.

One of the most critical components of a ducted air-conditioning system is the ducting itself. Hidden from view, these vital airways transport air at the correct temperature to where you want it. If these are poorly insulated heat will transfer between the duct and its surroundings. Rooms will be unevenly heated, or cooled, and your running costs will escalate.

Ductmaster ducting is constructed from the finest materials. The highest rated insulation material (R1) is carefully sandwiched between the internal tube and reflective aluminium foil. Heat transfer is minimised, ensuring the temperature achieved at the compressor unit is virtually unchanged when it arrives in your room.

The ducting needs to be both highly flexible and structurally strong. Ductmaster achieves both of these objectives by constructing the duct with an inner spring steel helix encircling the entire length of the tube. Even if someone stands on the duct, it will return to its original shape.

Ductmaster is made in Australia and fully guaranteed for 10 years against any structural defect or loss of thermal efficiency. It makes sense to get the most out of your ducted air-conditioning system - install the best available ducting.
